

Reading Concordances with Algorithms: a training course in key corpus linguistics methodology

Working with concordance tools

UTN Computational Linguistics Fall School
21–25 September 2026

Stephanie Evert & Michaela Mahlberg

What we have learned so far

- Concordances collect occurrences of a node for “vertical reading”
- Help (corpus) linguists to identify recurrent patterns
- It is not always easy to spot patterns in concordances (except for educational and famous examples)

Recap: Theoretical foundations

- Lexicogrammatical level:
 - Lexical item
 - Patterns (as in Pattern Grammar)
- Textual level
 - Local textual functions
 - Lexical Priming (Hoey 2005)
- Purpose of the analysis:
 - The study of fiction requires a “fiction-specific” approach, different from analysing socio-political debate around environmental issues

Methodology: a reading procedure (Sinclair 2003)

Step	Summary
1. Initiate	Decide on the strongest patterns to the left or right of the node (e.g., recurring words, word forms, or parts of speech.)
2. Interpret	Find a hypothesis that links (most of) the repeated words. The link could be lexical, semantic, or syntactic.
3. Consolidate	Look for further evidence to support the hypothesis (e.g., similar meanings expressed in different ways, words in more distant positions.)
4. Report	Write out an explicit, testable version for the future.
5. Recycle	Repeat steps 1–4 with the next most important pattern. Continue until you cannot find any more repeated patterns. Classify the remaining lines as either unusual or a potential pattern that is rare in this set of lines.
6. Result	Make a list of final hypotheses.
7. Repeat	Repeat with a new sample to confirm, extend, or revise your hypotheses.

Concordancing tools

- Are created for different purposes
- Follow different traditions (cf. yesterday's origin stories)
- Use different terminology (cf. concordance vs contexts)
- Combine functionalities (key words, n-grams, etc.)
- Can be specialised or general-purpose
- Can be web-based or standalone
- Often come with corpora
- Are continuously developed (until they aren't)
- Provide user support (hopefully)

Concordancing tools: CQPweb

Your query "[word="what"%c & !bound(s)] "a"%c [pos="JJ.*"]+ "night"%c" returned 18 matches in 15 different texts (in 98,511,777 words [9,802 texts]; frequency: 0.18 instances per million words)

CQPweb: A hands-on example

- Goal: Understand this [→] guy's rhetoric, terminology, phraseology and topics
- We need a large collection of texts written by Trump, e.g. the Trump Twitter Archive [www.thetrumparchive.com]
- Step 1: Compile a linguistic corpus ✓
- Step 2: Upload to indexing & search engine ✓
- Step 3: Analyse through concordance reading

CQPweb: A hands-on example

- CQPweb server @ FAU:

Extra information:

Log-likelihood (LL) scores collocations by significance: the higher the score, the more evidence you have that the association is not due to chance. More frequent words tend to get higher log-likelihood scores, because there is more evidence for such words.

There are 1,497 different lemmas in the collocation database for this query (Query "fake news", in subcorpus "Originals", returned 902 matches in 868 different texts)

What we have learned so far from using CLiC & CQPweb?

- ☐ What strategies have you applied?
- ☐ How do you describe what you do?

 - Lexicography
 - Data-driven learning
 - Corpus-assisted discourse studies
 - Literary stylistics
 - post-2000 publication; concrete examples

Selecting

Sampling

A random sample of 100 concordances of each pair was, subsequently, closely examined for semantic prosody. (Lexicography)

Filtering

A concordance query for carry out with research in the context of three tokens to the left and to the right returned 160 hits, and most lines indeed exhibited the collocation carry out research, as exemplified in Figure 8, (Lexicography)

Selecting

Cleaning

As we were interested in lexical compounds linked to carbon dioxide rather than carbon as an element, such lexical combinations as, for example, carbon molecule or carbon fibre were removed. Nonsensical combinations as well as duplicates arising from differences in spelling such as carbon offset and carbon-offset were also eliminated. (CADS)

Threshold

We analysed the first 500 concordances of seguire chosen as “good examples” by the Sketch Engine (cf. Kilgarriff et al., 2008) (Lexicography)

Ordering

Sorting

WordSmith Tools was mainly used for sorting and categorising concordances because it allows the analyst to assign values to lines and to move easily from concordance to text. [Figure 3 shows sorting by 1R] (CADS)

The students were then instructed to search for the preceding underlined word friendship using IntelliText, and to examine the concordance lines to identify which preposition should follow friendship in this context, by sorting right or left contexts in keyword-in-context (KWIC) lines. (DDL)

Ordering

Ranking

We analysed the first 500 concordances of seguire chosen as “good examples” by the Sketch Engine (cf. Kilgarriff et al., 2008)
(Lexicography)

Reading Concordances R21 Project

What do users do to organise concordance lines for interpretation? What drives the choices they make, beyond their intuition and the features of concordancing tools they are familiar with?

Our goals:

- 1. Develop a consistent methodology of concordance reading strategies and suggesting a transparent terminology that describes tool-independent principles of reading concordances.
- 2. Develop a concordance software framework and new algorithms that support a consistent concordance reading methodology: the FlexiConc library
- 3. Conduct case studies to illustrate the usefulness of the approach

Project description

Introduction to FlexiConc

FlexiConc is a Python package developed to facilitate and enhance the computational analysis of concordances, primarily intended for use in corpus linguistic research. The package is rooted in theoretical insights from the “Reading Concordances in the 21st Century” research project supported by the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) (grant references: AH/X002047/1 & AH/X002047/2) and the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG) (grant reference: 508235423).

The FlexiConc approach

1. Selecting

- “zoom in” on a subset of the concordance lines
- either focus on specific pattern or discard unwanted lines

subset

2. Ordering

- a) Sorting: reorder lines based on pairwise comparison
- b) Ranking: reorder lines based on preference score

arrangement

3. Grouping

- a) Partitioning: groups based on common property
- b) Clustering: (nested) groups based on pairwise similarity
