Key corpus linguistics methodology

A definition:

Corpus linguistics is the study of patterns in the language that are observable in samples of linguistic data (linguistic evidence).

Methodology in corpus linguistics (vs computational linguistics):

- Patterns need interpretation.
- Patterns are studied with a particular purpose in mind and in the context of a societal value system.
- Corpus linguistic methodology combines quantitative with qualitative analysis
- Link to AI: interpretability, explainability

Key corpus linguistics methodology

- Concordance analysis is a fundamental method
- When do we use concordances?
- How can we make sense of concordances?
- How does qualitative and quantitative analysis come together?
- It's useful to start looking at some history!

'I thought the mike was switched off...'

Matthew Tempest, political correspondent

theguardian.com, Wednesday 27 November 2002 13.58 GMT

The Canadian prime minister's press secretary, Françoise Ducros, was forced to resign yesterday after she referred to the US president, George Bush, as a "moron", during a private conversation with a journalist at last week's Nato summit in Prague. Our political correspondent, Matthew Tempest, looks at other accidentally overheard political insults.

1. President Bush

One of the highlights of the 2000 presidential campaign came when the then governor of Texas, George Bush, turned to his vice-presidential running mate Dick Cheney at a rally in Chicago, pointed out a reporter in the pack, presumed the microphone was switched off, and murmured: "There's Adam Clymer, a major league asshole from the New York Times."

"Oh yeah, he is, big time," Mr Cheney replied.

True feelings in text

7. Dr Richard Simpson

Few may have heard of the junior Labour minister at Holyrood with responsibility for the fire service, if he had not told dinner party guests his true feelings of the striking firefighters. He said of them: "These people aren't socialists, they're protectionists, they're fascists - the kind of people who supported Mussolini. We must not give in to these bastards." Despite insisting he was merely repeating other people's views on the dispute, Dr Simpson fell on his sword yesterday.

 CLiC
HEAD:d4e8e80

Welcome to CLiC. CLiC is a web app designed to support the computer-assisted study of narrative fiction. It started off with the CLiC Dickens project and now contains a range of fictional texts from children's literature to German novels (all out of copyright).

For more information on how to use CLiC, please take a look at the CLiC user guide. For inspiration on what to do with CLiC, the CLiC blog provides plenty of examples. If you are a creative writer, you might want to try out the CLiC Creative resources.

To get started searching the texts, please choose a function in the control bar to the right (click the icon in the top right if it is not displayed).

Citing CLiC

When you use CLiC in your work, please cite CLiC like this:

The texts in CLiC

Such as Jekyll & Hyde,
Frankenstein, Dracula, Jane Eyre and Pride and Prejudice

Such as A Christmas Carol, The Yellow Wallpaper, The Sign of the Four, but also some nonfiction like Dickens's American Notes and Pictures from Italy

Reading a story

Once upon a time--of all the good days in the year, on Christmas Eve--old Scrooge sat busy in his counting-house. It was cold, bleak, biting weather: foggy withal: and he could hear the people in the court outside, go wheezing up and down, beating their hands upon their breasts, and stamping their feet upon the pavement stones to warm them. The city clocks had only just gone three, but it was quite dark already--it had not been light all day--and candles were flaring in the windows of the neighbouring offices, like ruddy smears upon the palpable brown air. The fog came pouring in at every chink and keyhole, and was so dense without, that although the court was of the narrowest, the houses opposite were mere phantoms. To see the dingy cloud come drooping down, obscuring everything, one might have thought that Nature lived hard by, and was brewing on a large scale.

(A Christmas Carol, Stave 1, paragraph 10)

Exercise 1.b: The use of "fog*" across A Christmas Carol

1. Open the CLiC website in the Chrome browser (clic.bham.ac.uk)
2. Click on the "Concordance tab"
3. Under "Search the corpora", select "A Christmas Carol: A Ghost Story of Christmas (Charles Dickens)" – a fast option to select it is to start typing "Carol" and the title will be recommended.
4. Under "Search for terms", enter "fog*" (the * is a "wildcard", a placeholder for extra letters, so you will find words like foggy).
5. For each concordance line, click on the slider to see the "in bk." ("in book") view. Check the context for each occurrence: how is "fog" used here?
6. Describe the development that the different occurrences indicate from the beginning to the end of the novella.

A concordance displays all occurrences of a word, phrase, or pattern in a text or set of texts.

Welcome to CLiC. The CLiC web app has been developed as part of the CLiC Dickens project, which demonstrates through corpus stylistics how computer-assisted methods can be used to study literary texts and lead to new insights into how readers perceive fictional characters.

When the voice stopped, he put his hand over his eyes, murmuring that the light was strong upon them.

Little Dorrit put the book by, and presently arose quietly to shade the window. Maggy sat at her needlework in her old place. The light softened, Little Dorrit brought her chair closer to his side.

'This will soon be over now, dear Mr Clennam. Not only are Mr Doyce's letters to you so full of friendship and encouragement, but Mr Rugg says his letters to him are so full of help, and that everybody (now a little anger is past) is so considerate, and speaks so well of you, that it will soon be over now.'

'Dear girl. Dear heart. Good angel!'

'You praise me far too much. And yet it is such an exquisite pleasure to me to hear you speak so feelingly, and to--and to see,' said Little Dorrit, raising her eyes to his, 'how deeply you mean it, that I cannot say Don't.'

He lifted her hand to his lips.

'You have been here many, many times, when I have not seen you, Little Dorrit?'

'Yes, I have been here sometimes when I have not come into the room.'

'Very often?'

'Rather often,' said Little Dorrit, timidly.

'Every day?'

'I think,' said Little Dorrit, after hesitating, 'that I have been here at least twice every day.' He might have released the little light hand after fervently kissing it again; but that, with a very gentle lingering where it was, it seemed to court being retained. He took it in both of his, and it lay softly on his breast.
